Message from the Guest Editor

The present Special Issue is the second volume of a previous successful Issue, launched last year: (https://www.mdpi.com/journal/foods/special_issues/Postharves)

Following some recent studies showing various health benefits associated with their consumption. This Special Issue includes research on raw materials and on processed fruits and vegetables, involving grading, washing, cooling, peeling, blanching, size reduction, freezing, dehydration, canning, minimal processing, and sustainability. It is indeed essential to preserve quality and to reduce loss and waste in the application of appropriate postharvest handling and (new) technology for reducing undesired microbial contamination, spoilage, and decay, as well as maintaining a product's visual, textural, and nutritional quality. The knowledge of the biochemical and physiological bases of safety and quality evolution in fruits and vegetables provides good guidance for the maintenance of commodities and for the proper use of postharvest technologies and proper commercial product utilization.

Foods (ISSN 2304-8158) is an open access and peer reviewed scientific journal that publishes original articles, critical reviews, case reports, and short communications on food science. Articles are released monthly online, with unlimited free access. Currently, Foods has been indexed by the Science Citation Index Expanded (SCIE - Web of Science), PubMed, and Scopus. Our aim is to encourage scientists, researchers, and other food professionals to publish their experimental and theoretical results as much detail as possible. We therefore invite you to be one of our authors, and in doing so share your important research findings with the global food science community.

Author Benefits
