Message from the Guest Editor

Dear Colleagues,

Two years have passed since our first Special Issue on "Targets, Tracers and Translation". In the meantime, the journal was indexed by SCIE with an impressive IF of 4.286 for 2019. As the first Special Issue was a remarkable success, it has now been decided that the right time has arrived to open a Part 2.

With this Special Issue, we want to illustrate and highlight the variety in recent radiopharmaceutical developments and the new horizons that are opened toward a broad spectrum of applications. The final goal of these developments, of course, the successful translation into the clinics and into nuclear medicine practice, should always be the focus.

We cordially invite you to participate in this Special Issue, "Targets, Tracers and Translation, Part 2—New Horizons in Radiopharmaceutical Development" and are excited to receive your latest successful results and share them with the community. In addition to original works, reviews are very welcome, as well.
