Message from the Guest Editors

In this Special Issue, I would like to welcome the submission of papers from scholars working in the field that shed new light on the meditative practice in Central Asia. The scope of this Special Issue includes, but is not limited to, the following:

- Comparative studies of the Sanskrit and Chinese meditation texts;
- Doctrinal background of the meditation texts;
- The relationship between the Śrāvakayāna and the Bodhisattvayāna in meditative contexts;
- Textual history of the relevant meditation texts;
- Meditative practice observable in local language texts;
- Visionary images depicted in texts and art;
- Inscriptions and manuscripts relevant to meditation;
- Rock-cut and surface monasteries as the location for meditation.

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
