Message from the Guest Editor

The Fourth Industrial Revolution or Industry 4.0 affects all spheres of our lives: economy, culture, politics... and, of course, religion. The coincidence of technologies such as the internet, mobile devices, artificial intelligence, machine learning, big data and robotics represents unprecedented advances in history, but they can also be seen as threats. How are these concepts related to beliefs, religions, and even spirituality? How do institutions and leaders of this type make use of them? Are there notable differences between these examples and the rest of the applications of Industry 4.0 technologies? What trends or forecasts can be formulated from the data and certainties that exist today? In this Special Issue, we aspire to answer these questions and others related to the confluence of religions and the Fourth Industrial Revolution.

Message from the Editorial Board

Fresh developments in the disciplines that consistently make significant contributions to our understanding of religious personality, authority, devotion, and community - disciplines ranging from psychology, sociology, and anthropology to history, art history, philosophy, literary criticism, and political science – fuel general, as well as scholarly, interest in the world's religions.

Religions is inviting innovative and comparative contributions. Please consider Religions as an exceptional, exciting enterprise ready to reward your trust, attention, and participation.
