Recent advances in big data and analytics have also generated a growing interest amongst the research and academic communities in the use of such methods to promote and foster sustainability. This Special Issue attempts to complement and document the past and current efforts in this field, and in particular it aims to take stock of the current state-of the-art in the application of data, analytics and Al across the diverse economic and social domains, to showcase best practices, to forge new paths in future research, and to highlight the potential impact of such approaches to sustainability.
